

Bachelor of Arts: Anthropology
Minor: Anthropology

Anthropology is the study of people, their origins, physical nature, and social behavior. Through the Bachelor of Arts program at KU, students gain a broad and versatile understanding of human behavior and biology from the past to the present. This program provides rich diversity and academic potential in four major areas: linguistic anthropology, cultural anthropology, physical/biological anthropology, and archaeology. A summer field school experience where students learn the latest excavation and mapping techniques is also offered. We also have a museum on campus with opportunities for internships and community interaction.

A degree in Anthropology is ideal for students who wish to pursue graduate studies and/or careers in government, business, social services, the news media, museums, community activism or education.
